

BOYAWARDS

QUEBEC

Leveraged gold play into mid-tier firm

PHOTOS BY MARTINE LAROSE

Gabriel Bran Lopez, founder and president, Fusion Jeunesse, award recipient: special citation, Social Entrepreneur.

David Marotte, president and CEO, Groupe conseil KInnovation Inc., finalist: services business category.

Sylvie Myre, president, Voyages A Rabais, award recipient: business-to-consumer products and services category.

Mario Bouchard, president and CEO, IBwave, award recipient: information technology category.

Sanjay Bakshani and Viken Kanadjian, managing directors, Cesium Telecom Inc., finalists: business-to-consumer products and services category.

Sean Roosen, president and chief executive of Osisko Mining Corp. was named Ernst & Young Entrepreneur Of The Year 2011 for Quebec at a gala event in Montreal on Oct. 6. Mr. Roosen also won in the business-to-business products and services category.

"Sean [Roosen] is a true entrepreneur in action," said François Dufresne, partner and Quebec director of Entrepreneur Of The Year. "Through strong leadership and vision, he effectively orchestrated Osisko's development from exploration to development, and ultimately, to operations in the second quarter of 2011."

While other companies were pulling back during the financial downturn, Mr. Roosen was determined to bring Osisko — a development-stage gold mining company currently completing the construction of the Canadian Malartic, one of Canada's largest gold deposits — to a new level and overcome important challenges.

While junior exploration companies will typically divest their discoveries to large mining companies, he resolved to leverage Canadian Malartic into a new mid-tier Canadian mining company.

Other winners are: business-to-consumer products and services, Sylvie Myre, Voyages à rabais, voyagesarabais.com; health sciences, Frank Baylis and Krishan Shah, Baylis Medical Company Inc., baylismedical.com; information technology, Mario Bouchard, IBwave, ibwave.com; manufacturing, Jean-Robert Leclerc, Groupe Biscuits Leclerc, biscuitsleclerc.com; service business, Robert A. Frances, PEAK Financial Group, peakgroup.com; technology solutions, Patrick Ostiguy, Acceedian Networks, accedian.com, special citation — social entrepreneur, Gabriel Bran Lopez, Fusion Jeunesse, fusionjeunessequebec.org.

The Canadian program, in its 18th year, is sponsored nationally by National Post, La Presse and RDI. Quebec sponsors are Fonds de Solidarité FTQ. For more information go to ey.com/ca/EOY.

Financial Post

Jean-Robert Leclerc, chairman of the board, Groupe Biscuits Leclerc, award recipient: manufacturing.

Sean Roosen, president and CEO, Osisko Mining Corp., award recipient: business-to-business products and services category and Quebec Entrepreneur of the Year.

Danny Minogue, president, Minogue Medical Inc., finalist: health sciences category, and his wife.

Claude Bigras, president and CEO, Groupe Distinction Inc., finalist: business-to-business products and services category.

Robert Frances, president and CEO, PEAK Financial Group, award recipient: services business category.

Patrick Ostiguy, president and CEO, Acceedian Networks, award recipient: technology solutions category, and his wife.

FOY AWARDS

Gabriel Bran Lopez, founder and president, Fusion Jeunesse, award recipient: special citation, Social Entrepreneur.

PHOTOS BY MARTINE LAROSE

David Marotte, president and CEO, Groupe conseil FXInnovation Inc., finalist: services business category.

Sylvie Myre, president, Voyages A Rabais, award recipient: business-to-consumer products and services category.

Mario Bouchard, president and CEO, iBwave, award recipient: information technology category.

Claude Bigras, president and CEO, Groupe Distinction Inc., finalist: business-to-business products and services category.

QUEBEC Leveraged gold play into mid-tier firm

Sean Roosen, president and chief executive of Osisko Mining Corp., was named Ernst & Young Entrepreneur Of The Year 2011 for Quebec at a gala event in Montreal on Oct. 6. Mr. Roosen also won in the business-to-business products and services category.

"Sean [Roosen] is a true entrepreneur in action," said François Dufresne, partner and Quebec director of Entrepreneur Of The Year. "Through strong leadership and vision, he effectively orchestrated Osisko's development from exploration to development, and, ultimately, to operations in the second quarter of 2011."

While other companies were pulling back during the financial downturn, Mr. Roosen was determined to bring Osisko — a development-stage gold mining company currently completing the construction of the Canadian Malartic, one of Canada's largest gold deposits — to a new level and overcome important challenges.

While junior exploration companies will typically divest their discoveries to large mining companies, he resolved to leverage Canadian Malartic into a new mid-tier Canadian mining company.

Other winners are: business-to-consumer products and services, Sylvie Myre, Voyages à rabais, voyagesarabais.com; health sciences, Frank Baylis and Krishan Shah, Baylis Medical Company Inc., baylismedical.com; information technology, Mario Bouchard, iBwave, ibwave.com; manufacturing, Jean-Robert Leclerc, Groupe Biscuits Leclerc, biscuitsleclerc.com; service business, Robert A. Frances, PEAK Financial Group, peakgroup.com; technology solutions, Patrick Ostiguy, Acceidian Networks, accedian.com, special citation — social entrepreneur, Gabriel Bran Lopez, Fusion Jeunesse, fusion-jeunessequebec.org.

The Canadian program, in its 18th year, is sponsored nationally by National Post, La Presse and RDI. Quebec sponsors are Fonds de Solidarité FTQ. For more information go to ey.com/ca/FOY.

Financial Post

Jean-Robert Leclerc, chairman of the board, Groupe Biscuits Leclerc, award recipient: manufacturing.

Sean Roosen, president and CEO, Osisko Mining Corp., award recipient: business-to-business products and services category and Quebec Entrepreneur of the Year.

Danny Minogue, president, Minogue Medical Inc., finalist: health sciences category, and his wife.

